Walhalla Art Works is excited to announce the latest schedule of weekly after-school kids' art classes. Through a series of projects, including painting, sculpture, clay and lots and lots of drawing, students grades k-12 will be introduced to visual arts fundamentals and techniques. Small class sizes will allow them time and individual attention to hone their creativity and develop their technical skill. Kids will have the unique opportunity to experience a working art studio and use professional-grade materials such as charcoal, acrylics, and ceramics. Along with an exceptional art experience, kids will get a weekly chance to visit the "Artstead" and make new friends with like-minded kids as well as our goats, chickens and rabbits. Teens 12 and up will have a chance to participate in a printmaking workshop. This small, club like environment will expose them to a wide variety of drawing and printmaking styles, materials, and techniques while at the same time encouraging them to develop their own creative style. All classes will have less than 12 students and will be taught by Libby Imbody. Libby is a certified art educator and local artist. She has experience in a variety of art media and has been sharing her studio with students for over eleven years. Both semesters will culminate in an Art Show and Open House in which family members are invited. Classes will be offered Wednesdays in the form of two, 8 session semesters.
